One Devon

Care value of the month ...

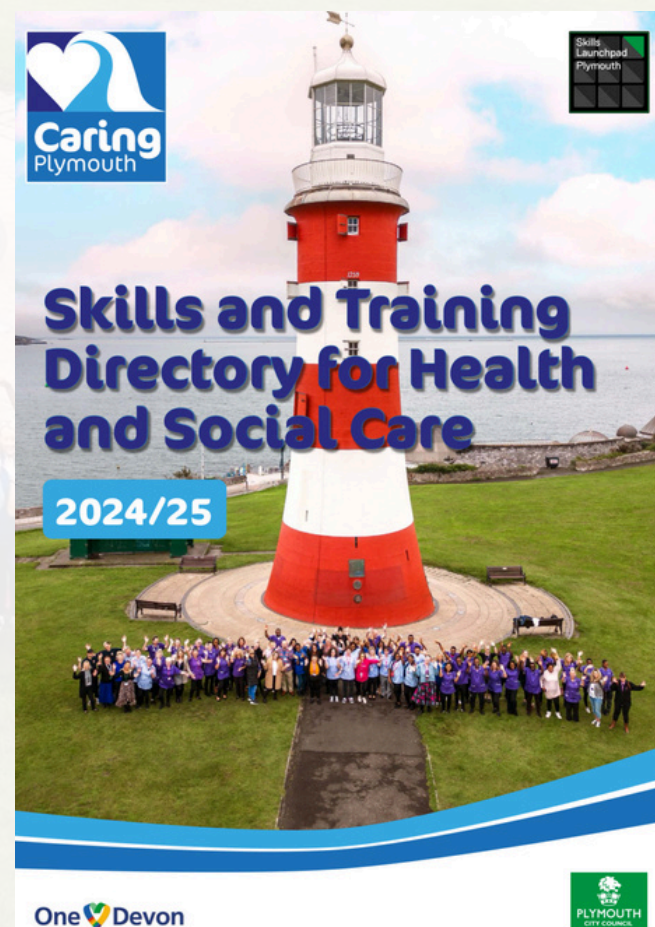

“Compassion is how care is given through relationships based on empathy, respect and dignity – it can also be described as intelligent kindness, and is central to how people perceive their care.”

Skills and training

Last month we launched the Caring Plymouth Skills and Training Directory. Whether you are looking to enter the sector by gaining the required skills, knowledge and qualifications, or are already working in the sector and looking for support to upskill, retrain or progress in your career, this localised directory showcases the breadth of health and social care offers from local training and education providers.

Caring Plymouth tackling workforce challenges

In September we hosted a system-wide workforce planning for health and social care event, bringing together the local workforce.

Strategies across University Hospitals Plymouth NHS Trust, Livewell Southwest and adult social care were presented and discussed, and working together as Caring Plymouth, we identified the key skills shortages and skills gaps, and prioritised coordinated actions that we need to take to deliver a sustainable, system-wide skilled workforce for the future.
